THE TRUE JOURNAL.

There is not a country on the face of the earth, that the newspaper has gained such a high position as in our own country. It is one of our national prides, the freedom of the press. Whatever other power the people have given their law-makers, they have refused to interfere with the newspaper, except to prevent gross libel, and in this, the Courts adjudicate. There is no law that could be enacted, but what would do as much evil as good; which would abridge true freedom as well as repress license. The regulation of the press is in the hands of the people, where it rightly belongs, for it is the voice of the people and they can determine whether it be true or false. It remains for the patrons to say what the code of ethics shall be. They are the ones that give support and make its existence possible; and it also lies with them to say whether this existence shall be for good or evil. Policies and motives are oft-times permitted to thrive in the conduct of newspapers that would not be tolerated in any other institution existing by popular favor. Men who would cut from their acquaintance one whom they detected in an outright falsehood, will continue to contribute money to the support of which they know well are given to the publication of the most shameful lies. Men who would strike to the earth any one who should carry a suspicion of shame to the purity of their household, will welcome, day after day, sheets which are reeking with polluting influences. Men who are quick to discern the rogue who would undermine their success and risk their fortunes under the guise of friendship, will still contribute to the support of papers which they plainly see are propagating the deadliest fallacies in the garb of philanthropy, or reaching, for the rewards of demagoguism under cover of claims for public benefit. Men who would denounce such wrongs if attempted in any other form, will quietly gulp down these sugar-coated pills of perfidy and perdition administered by the public press. And while prints, which are thus encouraged by patronage, can hold the support of the truth-lovers and at the same time serve to hire the interests of those who thrive upon the success of sinister designs, it is little wonder that we see such perversions of the freedom of the press as now exist. It is simply by the public sufficiency that such things are possible. It is simply because the managers of such low-toned and truckling sheets can bag the dollars of the well-disposed but thoughtless people, and at the same time drive bargains to sell the influence which this patronage bestows to those who will pay highest for it, that we see the wonderful and disgraceful exhibitions of journalistic gymnastics.

This is not a pleasant theme, but it is one of the utmost importance. What surety of right and safety is there when the voice of the people as spoken by the press, permitted to sink to the approval of false ideas of public policy? Who can tell to what end of wrong the tendency may go which takes its rise in the subjection of principle to the claims of private interest. What encouragement is there to individual uprightness, truth and nobility of purpose when the public press makes yesterday's outlaw the hero of today? What surety of the permanence of a good name by a life of disinterested goodness, when those who were yesterday pronounced dangerous to the public safety are to-day proclaimed the people's saviors? Blinded by partisanship and led by greed for gain, journals which public patronage should make zealous custodians of the general good are transformed into cringing, truckling servitors of personal ambition and propagators of profitable falsehood.

Is there no remedy? Yes, there is a sovereign remedy so long as the majority of the people are, as they are to-day, truth, lovers, patriotic and resolute. No fire will burn without fuel, and no service of the false will succeed unless it have the support which the friends of truth afford. If any journal gives unmistakable signs of selling truth for selfish gains, cut it off. Let it lose the support of the upright, and it will fall. If a journal aims to thrive by furnishing a fund of incidents and ideas which appeal to the baser passions, and fill the mind with low and groveling thoughts, banish it from pure homes into outer darkness which its tastes approve. There may be other approaches to the journalistic heart, but the one which is most available to the public is through the cash box. Withdraw support, and the journal which lends its eminence to the service of evil, will either purge itself of its evil or go down with it, the people determine that no journal shall live unless its ethics be high-toned and true.

RESERVATION REVOKED.

President Hayes Releases this Valley

Executive Order of January 10th Canceled.

The following Presidential order, we copy from the Tucson Citizen.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, WASHINGTON, July 14, 1879. In lieu of an Executive order dated January 10, 1879, setting apart certain lands in the Territory of Arizona, as a reservation for the Pima and Maricopa Indians, which order is hereby canceled, it is hereby ordered that there be withdrawn from sale and settlement and set apart for the use of said Pima and Maricopa Indians, as an addition to the reservation set apart for said Indians by act of Congress, approved February 28, 1859 (11 Stat. 401), the several tracts of country in said Territory of Arizona lying within the following boundaries, viz.: Beginning at the point where the range line between ranges four and five east crosses the Salt River; thence up and across the middle of said river to a point where the easterly line of Camp McDowell military reservation, if prolonged, would strike said river; thence northerly to the southeast corner of Camp McDowell military reservation; thence along the southern boundary line of said Camp McDowell military reservation to the southwest corner thereof; thence up and along the west boundary of said reservation until it intersects the north boundary of the southern tier of sections in township three north, range six east; thence west along the north boundary of the southern tier of sections in township three north, ranges five and six east, to the northwest corner of section thirty-one, township three north, range five east; thence south along the range line between ranges four and five east to the place of beginning.

Also, all the land in said Territory bounded and described as follows, viz.: Beginning at the northwest corner of the old Gila reservation; thence by a direct line running northwesterly until it strikes Salt River four miles east from the intersection of said river with the Gila River; thence down and along the middle of said Salt River to the mouth of the Gila River; thence up and along the middle of said Gila River to its intersection with the northwesterly boundary line of the old Gila reservation; thence northwesterly along said last described boundary line to the place of beginning.

It is also hereby ordered that so much of townships one and two north, ranges five and six east, lying south of the Salt River, as are now occupied and improved by said Indians, be temporarily withdrawn from sale and settlement until such time as they may severally dispose of and re-pay for the improvements made by them on said lands.

(Signed) R. B. HAYES.

We welcome to our table the Arizona, edited by that veteran editor John H. Marion. The copy before us is replete with local items of interest from his pen showing clearly that though a "prodigal" he is still the same ready writer as of old. We trust that our friends will succeed and that his new venture will be for the good of all the Territory.

Hon. J. J. Gosper, Secretary of the Territory and acting Governor, will arrive tomorrow from the Capital. Mr. Gosper is one of the proprietors of the HERALD.
